XV Conference on Space Biology and Aerospace Medicine
With International Participation

BION-M1 PROJECT:
Results and Forward Plans
18-20 of November 2014, Russia, Moscow

The Conference will be held on the Presidium of the Russian Academy of Sciences (32A Leninsky Prospect, Moscow, Russia)

Working languages: Russian and English

Goals of the Conference:

- Present and discuss the results obtained from the implementation of experiments and investigations of the Bion-M1 project
- Exchange information with foreign participants covering biological investigations performed after the Bion-M1 flight
- Inform the science community about results and forward plans for space biology research.

Major Topics:

- Experiments on gravitational physiology of animals (mice, lizards, snails)
- Experiments on gravitational biology, astrobiology and biotechnology
- Radiation biology and radiation physics investigations
- Engineering and managerial support of the implementation of the Bion-M1 research program

- Round table discussion of future space biology research projects.

The Conference is open to Bion-M1 participants and all other interested parties

Beginning with March 03, 2014, Conference participants should use the site www.bion-m.com to register, pay registration fees, and find more detailed information about the Conference.

The Conference program will include oral presentations of all Bion-M1 participants. Each presenter will be allowed 15 minutes, including questions and answers. Presentations will be submitted as Microsoft Office PowerPoint (version not lower than 2007).

At the end of the Conference it is planned to arrange a round table discussion concerning future biological investigations in near-Earth orbits. The participants that plan to make a 5 – 10 minute presentation containing research proposals and projects are requested to submit to the Organizing Committee its title and a brief description (no more than two A4 pages) by September 1, 2014.
